

Andreas Borchering

In 1982, after his formal training at Wolfgang Büttner and other teachers Andreas Borchering performed on stage for the first time in his home city of Munich. Since then, he appeared alongside countless theatre engagements and in over 200 parts on film and TV. His voice became familiar through the Bavarian radio channels as well as the enormous German Dubbing business. Three times he played Prime Minister Guenther Beckstein at the legendary strong beer tapping on the Nockherberg. In the years 2010 and 2011 he was the hotel owner Götz Zastrow on the popular telenovela "Storm Of Love". About 100 German dubbing dialogue books and a program of his own were also authored by him.
